¹ For a motorcycle driving test, a sidecar is not permitted for test purposes except in the case of a person with a disability.

² Design GVW means design gross vehicle weight i.e. maximum permissible laden weight - in the case of trucks this is normally set out on a metal plate on the inside of the door of the cab. If you have a doubt the vehicle manufacturer or your driving instructor will be able to give you advice.

³ Passenger accommodation means seating accommodation for passengers in addition to the driver.

You must provide the vehicle for the driving test. The type of vehicle required and the vehicle specifications will be advised to you in your appointment letter for the test.

2. Certificate of Professional Competence

New rules apply to persons who want to drive trucks and buses professionally (drive for a living). From 10 September 2008 in the case of a bus driver and 10 September 2009 in the case of a truck driver you must hold a Certificate of Professional Competence (CPC) to work as a professional driver.

If you want to drive either a truck or bus professionally and you don't hold a full driving licence (before 10 September 2008 for a bus or 10 September 2009 for a truck) either for the vehicle you want to drive or some other vehicle in the vehicle category you must take an extended two part driving test to qualify for the Certificate of Professional Competence.

A person who has a full driving licence, if for example you hold a C1 licence before 10 September 2009 and after that date you want to take a C licence to drive professionally you need only take the normal driving test to get the full C licence. As you already hold the C1 full licence you will gain an exemption from the extended CPC test.

Part one is the existing bus and truck test, which lasts approximately 90 minutes. Part two is a test of knowledge, lasting approximately 30 minutes, covering aspects of driver safety and proper procedure. These tests can be scheduled separately on different dates or together on the same day as requested by the test applicant.

Before taking the driving test a person must pass both the normal driver theory test and a special two part CPC theory test.

A person who is taking a bus or truck driving test and does not plan to drive professionally but decides to do so at a later date can take Part Two of the test to qualify for CPC providing this (and the necessary Theory Test) is done within a two year period.

For more information on CPC including details of drivers exempt from the new rules please visit our www.rsa.ie website and click on the CPC icon.

New applicants for a PPSN will be asked to produce documentary proof of identity and residence in this country.

The target of the Road Safety Authority is to have an average of a ten week waiting time for driving tests at test centres. From time to time waiting times will be longer or shorter given demand at individual test centres. Therefore, if you are not available at some point within 10 weeks of applying you should note this on the application form. Up to date waiting times, by test centre, will be available on the www.drivingtest.ie website.

Cancellations become available, often at short notice and if you can take a test with notice from as little as two days, and up to ten days, please advise this on the application form.

6. Disability

If you use a car that is adapted to enable you to drive because of a disability please let us know so that appropriate arrangements can be made for you on the day of the test. If you are deaf or have profound hearing loss please let us know. You will be asked a number of questions on the rules of the road at the beginning of the test; to help us make arrangements and to help you with instructions for the test on the day you can bring along a relative or a friend, but not a driving instructor. This person cannot however accompany you on the driving part of the test.

The learner permit was previously known as the provisional licence. The Driver Number is a nine digit number under item 5 on your learner permit. The learner permit reference code is a three digit number eg. 991, 992 noted opposite the category under the column marked restrictions information on your learner permit. Please supply the reference code and date of issue for the licence category in which you are applying for a test.

A first time holder of a learner permit (permit will have Code 991 noted opposite the category under the column marked restrictions / information) for licence categories A, A1, M, B, EB and W (Motorcycle, Car and Works Vehicle) must hold the learner permit for six months before taking the test.

In certain circumstances, you can only hold a learner permit if you already hold a full driving licence for a smaller/ lighter vehicle. Before applying for the test, you should ensure that you hold the correct learner permit.

Eligibility for a third or subsequent learner permit for any category of vehicle is dependent on you having taken a driving test within the previous two years or providing evidence of a forthcoming driving test in the vehicle category in question.

For more information on learner permits visit www.rsa.ie and click on the Driver Licensing icon.

If you have any doubt about your eligibility for a learner permit you should enquire immediately with your local Motor Taxation Office. The telephone numbers for Motor Taxation Offices can be located under the City & County Councils heading of the green pages in the telephone directory.
